

On Location: The Feng Shui GM Screen

This exciting new accessory for the Feng Shui action movie roleplaying game delivers two essential items, in one package, to GMs all over the world: a piece of cardboard and a sheaf of paper. Do not be misled by the apparently humble nature of these objects. The piece of cardboard is not just any piece of cardboard. Not by a long shot. Its a four-panel Feng Shui reference extravaganza, suitable for GMs to hide game notes and die rolls from players while keeping the most-referenced tables and charts from Feng Shui handy. Likewise, the sheaf of paper is not just any sheaf of paper. You can bet your grandmas heart pills on it. Its a 32-page booklet containing a bunch of locations you can use in your adventures when your imagination flags and you just cant figure out where to stage the next fight. Its especially useful when your characters wind up in another fight in a warehouse, apartment building, or back alley and you cant for the life of you figure out why this warehouse, apartment building, or back alley is any different from the last dozen of them where you staged fights.
