

Real Estate Practice in California

Real Estate Practice in California provides a comprehensive study of real estate practices in California as it relates to the real estate business, its regulations, income tax aspects, business opportunities, advertising, property sales, and the role of the broker and salesperson. This textbook and course workbook approved by the California Department of Real Estate for qualification for a California Real Estate Sales and/or Broker License covers licensing law, property, ownership of real property, contracts, agency and the transfer of property, financing, appraisal, titles and insurance, escrow, leasehold relationships, encumbrances, public controls, California law and ethical considerations, fair housing, property management, and real estate investments. In addition, each chapter includes a full glossary of terms as well as a multiple-choice written assignment for students.
