About the Author Brick Scorn was born prematurely on Hawaii's big island which is why the movie Little Big Man has been his favorite since childhood. He moved to the higher/easter 48 states as a toddler when his parents realized Brick was allergic to leis. Unfortunately, he didn't grow out of the affliction as he could never get close to getting laid as a young adult. Brick has endured many hardships (Has anyone heard of a soft ship? Wouldn't the champagne bottle puncture it at the christening?) in his life, including when his parents divorced after his mother realized that his father's job title of Indoor Recreational Equipment Demonstrator was actually Waterbed Salesman. After a highly successful part-time job at a dog food plant, Brick received an Animal Husbandry scholarship from NYU (Newfoundland Yorkie University). He was a distinguished (voted most likely to give his professors prematurely grey hair at the temples) student receiving some Attaboys, several Good Efforts, and one This is Somewhat Better. Midway through the fourth semester of his freshman year, he switched majors and eventually earned a degree in Paranormal Romance with an emphasis in Edward (Brick has always thought that skinny, pale guys are underappreciated). Currently, Brick is the First Senior Vice President of Nocturnal Mission Statements, Senior Executive Vice President of Indecisive Management Sciences, Regional First Vice President of Spontaneous Reorganizations, and Senior Executive First Regional Vice President of Morgue Morale at the Mega-Colossal-Super Store Headquarters in Rockytop, Tennessee. His book, Sell, Sell! What the Hell? has ranked as high as #1,873,359 in Amazon's Sales/Marketing/Con/Flim-Flam/No-Apparent-Conscience category.
